idX expands Global Project Services capabilities

St. Louis, MO--idX Corporation, long known as a leading global manufacturer of retail store fixtures, has quickly become the go-to solution for blue chip companies pursuing large, complex roll-outs in multiple countries. To support these growing demands, idX is increasing its focus and investment in the company's global project services capabilities.

idX's St. Louis offices will house the Global Project Services operation and coordinate the increasing need for idX global development, logistics, supply chain management and turn key project management services.

"As of today, idX is involved in projects across every type of retail in 146 countries on six continents," said Scott Norvell, idX EVP Global Project Services. "Focusing on our refined global project management model, clients are already seeing a significant benefit in everything from multi-national best practices and supplier sourcing to consistent product solutions around the globe and in-region implementation."

In addition to idX's core apparel and accessories market, current clients include brands in the automotive, QSR, telecom and consumer electronics segments. Project components have also expanded beyond fixture solutions to include décor, furniture, flooring, back-of-house, lighting, electronics and technology.

To support this growth and diversity of clients and projects, idX has expanded both its manufacturing and distribution capabilities in countries including India and China. The St. Louis warehouse operation will be consolidated into more strategic geographic locations at other idX facilities worldwide based on customers' specific project needs.
